Maximize Your Workforce

More and more, employers are offering tuition assistance as a strategic employee benefit. Why? Because when you pay for your employees' education, everybody wins.

Top Talent Recruitment

The promise of higher education is attractive to job-seekers—especially those who care about their work and are serious about growing their careers. When you offer tuition assistance, high-quality candidates are more likely to accept a position with your company.

Increased Staff Retention

Working adults want the chance to learn and earn at the same time, and those who use tuition assistance programs feel loyal to their employer. In fact, 76% of employees say a tuition reimbursement program would make them more likely to remain at their organization.¹

New Skills, New Ideas

One of the most prevalent reasons employees use their company's tuition assistance program is to keep pace with or get ahead of changes in their position.¹ Employees want current information and relevant skills, which translates to innovation and proactive thinking in the workplace.

Flexible Education Options

There are several ways an employee can use a tuition assistance program—they can complete a full degree, earn a certificate or just take individual courses. Regardless of the path they choose, employees who continue their education become more valuable and effective team members.

Hiring Vets Is Good Business

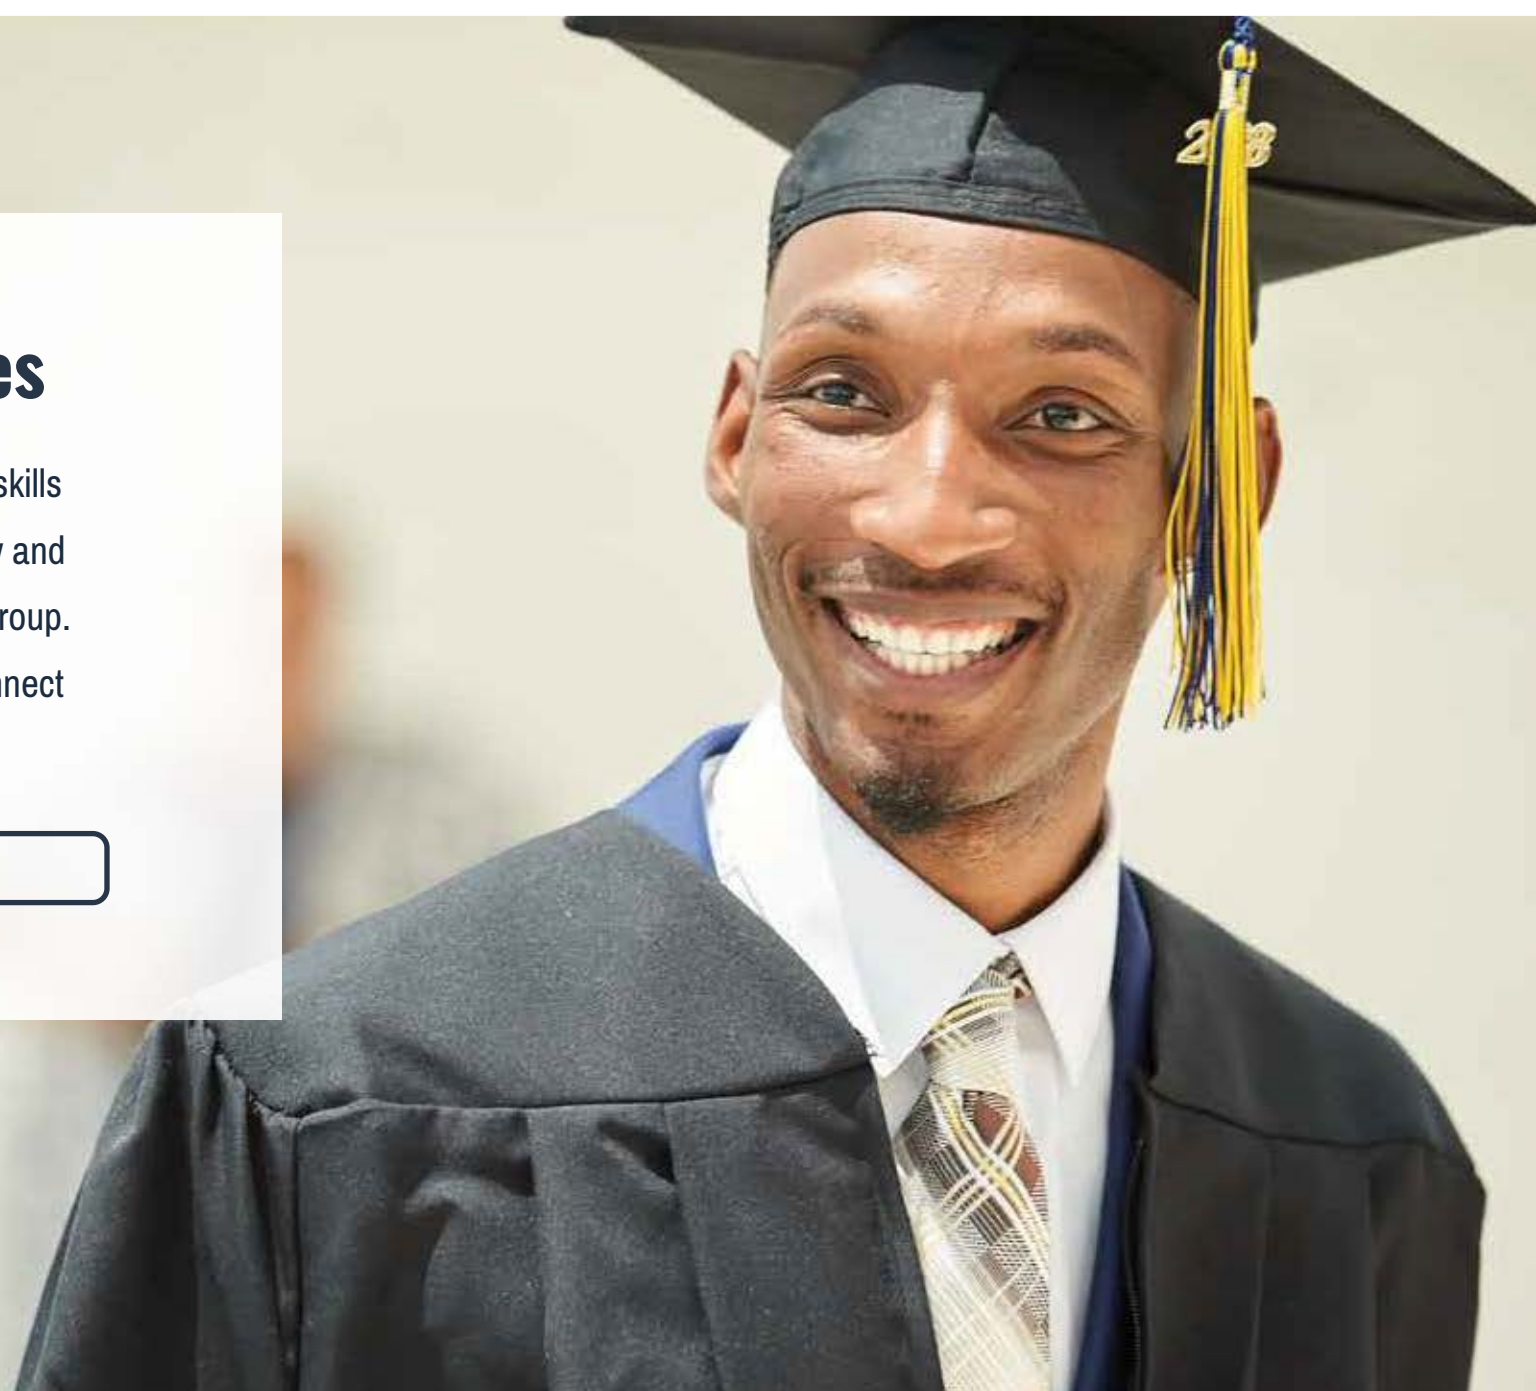

Finding the right candidate for the job sometimes feels harder than it should be. But there's a pool of graduates who already have the work ethic, discipline and skills to hit the ground running—military veterans. Our no-cost Hiring Vets Is Good Business program helps employers and human resource professionals build expertise in locating, hiring and retaining desirable military candidates, thereby advancing your veteran hiring initiative.

// ABOUT GRANTHAM

Founded in 1951, Grantham University began as a traditional college in Southern California. As interest in Grantham's degree programs grew beyond campus boundaries, the university developed distance education programs to serve a geographically dispersed student body. Over time and as technology advanced, so did Grantham's ability to serve its students. In the late 1990s, it began offering degree programs exclusively online.

Today, Grantham is still 100% online and offers more than 50 degree and certificate programs in four different colleges and schools. With specialized accreditation from leading organizations like IACBE, PMI, ABET and ACEN, Grantham is known for delivering quality, convenient and affordable education to adult learners across the globe.

// A CULTURE OF GIVING BACK

At Grantham, we're committed to creating better futures for everyone, including those outside of our virtual classrooms. That's why we created Grantham Gives Back, a program that houses sponsorships, volunteerism, donation drives and a special employee-funded, university-matched community grant. We believe in benevolence across our entire organization, so we encourage all stakeholders—employees, students and alumni—to participate in the Grantham Gives Back program.

// OPPORTUNITIES FOR EVERYONE

Grantham offers fulfilling careers in a variety of departments and disciplines—everything from student-facing roles in academics, admissions and advising to more specialized positions in accounting, IT and marketing.

We're unified by our mission to maximize the impact of our students, staff and the community. We have a heritage of service and a strong vision for the future.
